Section 3: A list and brief description of Long-Term (or “Prong 3”) non-vacancy-specific recruitment initiatives implemented during the previous year.

The Edward R. Murrow College of Communication at Washington State University Career Symposium and Public Address/Hosting Job Fair:

In April, the College sponsored the Murrow Symposium Career Day which featured a Murrow Career Day: Meet the Pros. Students and faculty of the College were encouraged to attend workshops, including résumé critiques, and a discussion on the future of the communication industry.

Northwest Public Television

Internship Program

The Northwest Public Television (NWPTV) Internship program is designed to give staff the opportunity to involve themselves more deeply in training of student and part-time employees and also gain knowledge in order to perform at a higher level. The program is based on that of another noncommercial educational station, which provides a model for this type of two-way training that is so valuable in broadcasting, especially in a small market where recruiting and retention of qualified individuals is difficult and poses a significant challenge. Examples of internship projects include: working as crew members for many on and off campus projects supported by NWPTV; working as program producer and production assistant; assistance with maintaining NWPTV web site; and editing of programs for use on-air and off. During the period between October 1, 2015 and September 30, 2016, NWPTV had 13 interns.

Training Programs for Stations Personnel/Mentorship Program

Washington State is determined to strengthen its program in the television area, by promoting the idea to staff and by creating specific job descriptions for the student-mentoring positions. In addition to enabling staff to “teach” others, we also have a policy that allows employees to take up to 6 credits of university credits per semester under a tuition-waiver program. The licensee supports this as a way of recruiting qualified individuals to this rural area and to retain and retrain current employees in order to advance. The organization continues to reap the benefits of this mentoring program.

Events or Programs with Educational Institutions Relating to Broadcasting Careers

NWPTV staff made presentations during the first week of several communication classes at Washington State University. The purpose was to inform students of intern opportunities with the station and how it might help them develop career skills in both television and radio. This internship program was also promoted to students on the station’s website and on flyers posted in campus buildings. NWPTV continues, on an annual basis, to set up a booth at the Family Expo in the Tri-Cities area that allows them the opportunity to talk with children and parents about a number of topics including a child’s “dream” to work in television.

Northwest Public Radio

Internship Program

Northwest Public Radio (NWPR) has an active internship program. The staff of NWPR regularly participates in area college and high school career days in our broadcast region. Students learned more about public broadcasting, received information on how to get involved, and what internship opportunities exist. During the period from October 1, 2015 to September 30, 2016, NWPR had 16 internship positions filled including internships in News Production, Marketing, Broadcast Operations and Programming.

Events with Community Groups Relating to Broadcasting Career Opportunities

The station also regularly hosts tours and open houses for community groups, volunteers and general public to visit the station. NWPR staff routinely speak in front of students in classroom or special presentations about careers in public broadcasting in general and opportunities at Northwest Public Radio specifically. NWPR is also involved in local community events, musical performances and fairs and distributes information about the station and opportunities with members of the public at these events. The staff of NWPR serve on many community groups such as Boys and Girls Club, Rotary and Kiwanis, within these organizations and their activities, NWPR staff is recognized and invited to work with youth and community volunteers.

The population of the market for this environment unit is fewer than 250,000, and the stations are therefore required to complete 2 long-term recruitment activities every year.
